Lutezia is a collection of taps and accessories designed by architect Jean-Michel Wilmotte for Italian brassware brand CEA.

Designed and made for the Renaissance style of the Grand Luxury Hôtel Palace Lutetia in Paris, the collection aims to evoke the refined taste of the Belle Époque. Its soft and rounded lines give lightness to the form for a tap made from stainless steel and available in a satin or polished finish, as well as black diamond, bronze, copper and light gold options.
